This lovely thatched cottage, the subject of the model known as Pencil Cottage is now a small shop with tearooms, and has fretted bargeboards on the gable, as indicated on the model. It is said to be 200 years old, and is typical of the numerous cottages that form the old village, which attracted and inspired Keats to write in the 19th century "A thing of beauty is a joy forever", and Longfellow to write, "O traveller, stay thy weary feet." ... The model cottage is unmarked but may have been made in Stoke by Vectis (the Roman name for the Isle of Wight). There is a Lilliput Lane Cottage modelled on Pencil Cottage called "Sweets and Treats." 239. Unmarked Izaac Waltons Cottage (RARE) 100.00
Willow and Willow Art coloured cottages were produced between 1905 and 1930 when the marks were no longer used, although some models were made using Willow moulds eg. John Knox's House is often marked with a Goss England back stamp, but it is the Willow mould. We mention this because we have recently come across an Izaak Walton cottage, so similar to a Willow Art Ann Hathaway's cottage that it could be mistaken for it (unless it was examined carefully) and it may be that production spanned 1930 with earlier models bearing the Willow mark. Stratford upon Avon's Harvard House is by Willow, but of the four coloured cottages we have seen only one has been marked – proof in our eyes that Willow did not mark all the cottages it produced. 'Our' Isaac Walton cottage is unmarked except for its name (unusually spelt with two 's' (not Izaac) and is very well coloured on the front and one end. It has two lovely 'eyebrow' windows and two doors just like the Leadbeater and Goss models (the Ann Hathaway models have just the one central door) ... Refer to page 52 in 'Collecting Miniature Coloured Cottages for more details. Marie Corelli (1855-1924) was a popular and prolific author of romantic and moralistic fiction at the turn of the century, writing, in all, some 28 novels. Unfortunately, her style has not withstood the test of time, and she is little known today. Marie Corelli was her pseudonym; her real name was Mary Mackay. Flamboyant, small and aggressive, she was not always tactful, although Queen Victoria and Gladstone, among other eminent people, admired her. She did much to encourage the preservation and restoration of ancient buildings, including Harvard House [another crested china coloured building]. *Advised to leave London for her health, she chose Stratford and after first living in Hall's Croft, William Shakespeare's old home, she settled in 1901 in Mason Croft ... The front of the model (unlike the house today) has a green vine, probably Virgina Creeper. (*Collecting Miniature Coloured Cottages by

242. Willow The Birthplace of Andrew Carnegie (Rare) 200.00

In 1835 when [Dunfermline's] most famous son, Andrew Carnegie, was born, neither the railway nor road bridge existed. The Carnegie family lived in one of the attic rooms in the cottage in Moodie Street, the downstairs being used for weaving. Andrew's father was a weaver of fine linen (damask) with first one, then later four looms. At the time there was also an annexe which formed a small shop, and this is the version similar to the early bisque model [see page 90 of the below book] *The annexe was removed for road improvements and the Willow model, which shows a new window reflects the alteration. In Mat 1848 the impoverished family decided to join relatives in Pittsburgh USA. Andrew began his later glittering career as a bobbin boy ... By taking evening classes and using the library he soon progressed and at the age of 33, after the Civil War, was earning $50,000 per annum. However, despite his new found wealth, he never forgot his native Scotland, purchasing several properties there. Retiring early, he endowed 3000 libraries and 8000 church organs, and made many other charitable donations. ... The Willow Art model is extremely rare. 244. Unmarked Old Ostrich Inn Full inscription on back Broadway 200.00
The Ostrich Inn is said to be the fourth oldest inn in the country, but records dating from 1106 suggest that it may actually be the oldest. During the Middle Ages it was often used by guests to change before arriving at Windsor Castle. It was rebuilt in 1500 of timber and plaster, with a red tiled roof and a projecting upper storey, with gables at either end. A gateway, with gates from the rebuilding, leads to the old stable yard (now a car park). In 1635 Colnbrook [where the Inn is] received a charter which included provision for a weekly market, as well as for a 'pie powder' court, which was held in the Ostrich Inn. These were wayfarers' courts – from the French 'pieds poudreux' meaning dusty footed – which had summary powers over buyers and sellers who were there temporarily. However, a few years later, during the Civil War, it lost its charter and reverted to village status. In the 18th century it became a staging post on the road from London to Bristol, and later achieved notoriety when an innkeeper named Jarman, was alleged to have murdered some 60 people by tipping sleeping travellers into a cauldron of boiling water ...
